

Healthcare in Estonia 2024

Useful tips & contacts:

- In case of emergency, call ☎ 112!
- Emergency care and ambulance are provided to all the people on the territory of Estonia free of charge, including foreign nationals and people without health insurance.
- Every Estonian citizen, every person residing in Estonia on the basis of a residence permit or right of residence, and every foreigner who is temporarily insured in Estonia can register in the list of a family doctor (also known as general practitioner) and change their family doctor on the basis of a written application.
- If you have health (including mental health issues) concern which does not require emergency care, always contact your family doctor.
- If you have a health concern but your family doctor is not available, calling the family doctor counselling line ☎ 1220 can be helpful*. When calling from abroad, dial ☎ +372 634 6630. In English, the phone is open every day at 3 p.m. – 5 p.m. More information about the counselling line can be found on 1220.ee
- Turn to the Estonian Health Insurance Fund if you have questions e.g. about choosing or changing your family doctor, the availability of medical care, Estonian national health insurance: ☎ +372 669 6630 or ✉ info@tervisekassa.ee
- Information about healthcare services for refugees from Ukraine can also be found on Estonian Health Insurance Fund website www.tervisekassa.ee
- Turn to national midwife helpline ☎ 12252 if you have a question/concern about your pregnancy or about your baby's health.
- In most cases, family doctor's referral is also required to access the specialist doctor. Family doctor's referral is not needed for contacting psychiatrist, gynaecologist, dermatologist, dentist, ophthalmologist or if you have a major trauma.
- Dental care is free for children under the age of 19. Adults have the right for free emergency dental care.
- All the people staying in Estonia with a temporary residence permit must have a valid health insurance during their stay. If the Estonian national health insurance does not apply to you (see chapter 7), you need to buy it yourself from a private insurance company.

*When calling ☎ 1220, the caller will pay for the call from the first minute according to the price lists of telephone operators (approximately 0.30 €/min).

 When calling ☎ 12252, the caller will pay for the call 1.20 €/min.

Introduction to Estonian Healthcare System

As a general rule, the first contact with the medical system should be your family doctor, who together with a family nurse provide primary care.

Please note, that in Estonia, all health care providers are independent entities operating under private law. Family doctors operate as private entrepreneurs or salaried employees of private companies owned by family doctors or local municipalities. Most hospitals are either limited liability companies owned by local governments or foundations established by the state, municipalities or other public agencies. The remaining few are privately owned.

Please also note, that being able to speak English or Russian is not a requirement for doctors to practice in Estonia, so you should not assume that a family doctor and/or other medical staff are able to communicate with you in languages other than Estonian. However, it is possible if the doctor and patient mutually agree to it. You can also visit clinics and doctors with an interpreter or a support person.

It is possible to apply compensation for translation services in the amount of up to 3,200 euros for the family of war refugees within two years or 1,600 euros per individual war refugee. Subsidies are processed and paid out by the local government.

Your positive and constructive feedback about provided healthcare service quality or other nuances is valued and you can submit it to healthcare service provider directly, usually through their website or general e-mail.

Estonian medical care is divided into three levels:

Family doctors together with nurses make up the primary care team, which offers health services and counselling to all residents regardless of their age, health condition, or occupation. For example, the primary care team can monitor a child's development progress, provide guidance to persons living with chronic conditions, perform minor surgical procedures, administer vaccinations, bind wounds, remove stitches, make home visits, give advice on care of injuries and intoxications, open sick leaves and provide counselling for mental health issues or addiction disorder. Independent appointments with a family nurse are also possible to receive advice and guidance in promoting and maintaining health and preventing or monitoring (chronic) diseases — generally it's the family nurse who provides first assistance in the event of illness. If necessary, the family nurse consults the family physician or directs the patient to visit the family physician.

Family doctors can also issue medical certificates for working in specific vocations (e.g. food handling and teachers) and driver's licenses. Family doctors can also consult (e-consultation) with specialist doctors and provide referrals to the next level of care.

Family doctors are assigned to patient directories (lists), which have designated service areas generally at either city, town or local municipality level. The maximum amount of patients in a list is 2000 people (or 2400, if working together with an assistant doctor). Family doctors can also work in a group practice.

Adults and children relocating to Estonia from other countries are not automatically assigned to a family doctor's list and have to submit a signed application to their chosen family doctor. Newborns are automatically registered with their mother's family doctor, if available. Family doctors can, but are not required by law to accept new patients if their list is full or if the applicant is not registered resident in the doctor's service area. After submitting the application, the applicant has to be informed of the doctor's decision within 7 work days.

More information about finding and applying to your local family doctor and related application forms can be found on the website of Estonian Health Insurance Fund:

www.tervisekassa.ee/en/primary-health-care or by e-mail: info@tervisekassa.ee & phone: ☎ +372 634 6630

Specialised Medical & Nursing Care

No referral is needed to turn to:

dentist, ophthalmologist;
dermatologist or venereologist;
gynaecologist; psychiatrist.

Generally, you will be issued a referral to specialized care if your family doctor determines that your health concern requires the involvement of a more specialized doctor. No referral is needed to turn to: dentist; ophthalmologist; dermatologist or venereologist; gynecologist; psychiatrist.

If you are insured by Estonian Health Insurance Fund (EHIF), you have the right to choose the specialist that is suitable for you and an appointment time in any health care institution which is under contract with the EHIF. The fund's contract partners serve all insured individuals regardless of their place of residence, and the list of contract partners can be found at www.tervisekassa.ee/en/specialised-medical-care Patients in need of specialized care are placed on a waiting list according to the seriousness of their condition. If a person has a very serious illness, the family doctor and the specialist doctor can work together to adjust the waiting list so that care can be given more quickly. Others whose health concern is less critical will receive care in an appropriate timeframe so that their condition does not worsen.

Specialized healthcare is divided into three:

1 Ambulatory care

Ambulatory care means a doctor visit, in the course of which a person is examined, procedures are done (blood test, ECG, etc.), and if needed, further treatment is determined. The patient will not remain in the hospital.

2 Day care

Day care is a healthcare service for patients in need of assessment or treatment in a hospital bed during the day; the patient will not stay overnight.

3 Stationary care

Stationary care is given at a hospital and the patient must stay overnight or even longer.

When visiting a specialist, treatment facilities have the right to charge you up to 5 euros for a visit fee.

There is no in-patient fee:

- for children below the age of 2,
- in cases related to pregnancy and childbirth,
- in the case of intensive care.
- if the patient is to be referred to another doctor at the same facility.

During a hospital stay, you may be charged €2.50 per day for your room, up to a maximum of €25 per hospital stay.

The purpose of nursing care is to maintain and, where possible, improve the state of health and ability to cope of patients, to provide treatment and support to patients in a stable condition and, if necessary, to alleviate their ailments. Nursing care also helps people prepare for going to a care institution or home. Nursing care is provided both in inpatient (hospital or care institution) and outpatient (home nursing, home supportive care for cancer patients) environment, depending on the patient's need. A doctor decides whether a patient needs nursing care and provides a patient with a referral for the service.

E-health & Prescriptions

All healthcare service providers are required by law to document the provision of healthcare services and transmit your health information to the digital health information system - Terviseportaal as soon as possible. All of the most important medical data describing your health is gathered there.

Using an ID-card, residence permit card or mobile ID & Smart-ID, you can log in to the governmental gateway portal www.eesti.ee or digital health information system www.terviseportaal.ee and see the registered health information of your own and your children (under the age of 18).

Through the health portal www.terviseportaal.ee you also can, for example.:

- view your own health information, i.e. medical documents compiled by doctors (i.e. case histories, analysis results, referrals);
- designate representatives for various functions;
- present declarations of will;
- check when your information has been viewed and by whom;
- view prescriptions and when they have been purchased;
- notify all medical institutions at once of changes to your contact information;
- set up reminders for appointments with doctors.

If you aren't sure how to access governmental digital services, please refer to: www.id.ee

Medications available in Estonian pharmacies are divided in two categories: over-the-counter and prescription medications. By default, you can buy over-the-counter medications in unlimited amounts similarly to any other consumer goods (e.g. cough medicine, painkillers, food additives, vitamins), but a prescription from a doctor is required to buy prescription medications (e.g. antibiotics, tranquilizers, beta-blockers).

In Estonia, doctors do not sell prescription medicines – you will have to visit a pharmacy to buy them. Prescriptions themselves are by default issued digitally – the prescription is not printed out and is sent from the issuing doctor directly to the digital prescription center. Prescriptions can still be issued on paper, but usually in separate cases, e.g. when the patient plans to go abroad and wishes to buy prescription medication there.

To purchase a prescription medication, you must have an identity document with you in the pharmacy with your picture and Estonian identity number. You can use, for instance, an ID card, driver's license, or passport.

Estonian digital prescription is also accepted in pharmacies at Finland, Croatia, Czechia, Poland, Portugal and Spain. When purchasing a prescribed medicine, you'll only need to bring an ID card or passport.

Estonian Health Insurance Fund reimburses prescription medicines to a certain extent, in case their effectiveness has been previously thoroughly assessed and therefore, they have been included in the list of reimbursed pharmaceuticals. These pharmaceuticals are available at a 50, 75, 90 or 100% discount. The highest discount rates are available for principal pharmaceuticals needed for treating serious and chronic diseases, or for certain groups of the population (old-age and incapacity pensioners). The buyer has to pay a prescription fee of 2.5 euros for each prescription medicine.

More information on reimbursement and availability of pharmaceuticals can be found at the website of EHIF: www.tervisekassa.ee/en/people/pharmaceuticals

In Estonia, prescriptions are usually issued digitally – the prescription is not printed out and is sent from the issuing doctor directly to the prescription centre.

Health Insurance in Estonia

Estonia has unified national health insurance, which ensures quality medical care for every insured person. Thus, access to medical care does not depend on one's age, income, or place of residence. Funding for the unified health insurance of Estonia comes from the insurance tax (social tax), which is paid on the income of workforce. In addition to the working people, many others have insurance like children, pregnant women, unemployed people, pensioners etc. National health insurance coverage is supervised and medical expenses are paid by Tervisekassa – Estonian Health Insurance Fund (EHIF). It should be noted that most adult patients covered by the national health insurance are still required to pay medical fees, such as in-patient fees, co-payments towards prescriptions, etc.

Funding for the unified health insurance of Estonia comes from the insurance tax (social tax), which is paid on the income of workforce.

An insured person is a permanent resident of the Republic of Estonia or a person living in Estonia by virtue of a temporary residence permit or by the right of permanent residence, who pays the social tax for himself/herself or for whom the payer of social tax is required to pay social tax.

Health Insurance in Estonia under certificate S1

for old age pensioner, posted worker, cross-border worker or worker in several countries

If you are uninsured, you can either apply for a voluntary state insurance by EHIF or purchase insurance from a private provider, for example from:

Pensioners moving to Estonia from another EU Member State have the right to receive medical care in Estonia on equal terms with Estonian old age pensioners. In order to prove this right, certificates S1 issued by the social or health insurance institution of the country from which the person receives retirement payment.

In order to receive medical care in Estonia a cross-border worker, an employee or an employee in several countries posted to Estonia from another EU Member State, the European Economic Area member state, Switzerland or United Kingdom must apply for the certificate S1 from his home country. Certificates S1 must always be submitted to the Estonian Health Insurance Fund.

Person must bring certificate S1 to the EHIF's customer service office or send it by regular mail. After the S1 certificate is registered, the person will be notified in writing of the granting of health insurance.

European Health Insurance Card in the European Union

If you have Estonian national health insurance coverage and you stay temporarily in another EU member state, you can receive necessary medical care on equal terms to insured people living in such a country.

Necessary medical care is considered to be the treatment of an unexpected health disorder occurring during a stay in another European Union country. Necessary medical care must be medically justified and a doctor must consider the expected duration of treatment and the nature of the health care service. Necessary medical care covers, for example, high fever, abdominal pain, heart attack or accidental injury.

You will have to provide to a medical institution in another EU member state your European Health Insurance Card (EHIC) or a replacement certificate and your identity document. The right to receive health services on the basis of the EHIC applies only in medical institutions belonging to the public health care system (it does not include private clinics). With a valid Estonian national health insurance coverage, you can apply for the EHIC card and related documents at the Estonian Health Insurance Fund or order it from the state portal:

PS! Third-country nationals can not use the European Health Insurance Card or its replacement certificate to receive treatment in Denmark, Iceland, Liechtenstein, Norway or Switzerland. Before traveling to these countries, we recommend signing a separate health insurance contract with a private insurance company.

Private Healthcare

The advantage of private healthcare lies in shorter waiting times and usually the services can be offered in other languages than Estonian. In private hospitals and clinics, you will have to pay for the services yourself. If you have a private insurance, you should firstly check with your insurance provider if the insurance might cover some of the fees. To find a suitable private clinic, ask for recommendations from your friends, your family doctor, your insurer or search online.

Salu.md offers a fast and affordable alternative to a family doctor. The packages include consultations with a doctor 7 days a week in your preferred language (English, Russian, or Estonian), opening a sick leave, obtaining and renewing prescription drugs, issuing referrals to specialist doctors, and more. They also offer in-person appointments and lab tests in partner clinics in Estonia.

Child Health Development

A healthy infant is monitored by a family doctor and nurse during the first year of life prophylactically on a monthly basis. In these visits, children are also weighed and measured. In addition, the family nurse's job is to advise the parents on child nutrition, hygiene, care, prevention of accidents, and the like. A pediatrician visit is not intended for a healthy infant. If necessary, the family doctor will refer the child to a medical specialist, such as a neurologist or orthopedist.

If a child has born into your family, please inform your family doctor about it in order to confirm that the child's personal data is registered and that child has a personal identification number.

There is no health care provider in the kindergarten who could competently assess the state of health of the child. In practice, however, there may be situations where a parent wants to take their child who shows clear symptoms of a disease to kindergarten, while parents of other children want to protect their child from a possible risk of infection. It is important to keep in mind the well-being of both the child with symptoms and other children. If kindergarten staff have any doubts about the child's health, they can advise the parent to contact their family physician.

A 6–7 years old child must undergo a pre-school health examination by a family physician. The physician assesses the child's development and readiness for school. Among other things, visual and auditory acuity and speech development are checked. In case of abnormalities, the physician can refer the child for further examination, to a speech therapist or ophthalmologist. You should take your child to the health check-up well before the school starts, as early as in spring. Then, you will have enough time to solve any problems found, for example, by diabetes into school life has started well; it helps to diagnose the disease before school and respective specialists provide necessary training and support to school staff.

When a child is admitted to school, the consent of the parent to provide school health care is requested. From 1 April 2020, the school nurse will perform health examinations for 1st, 3rd, 7th, and 11th grade students. Fifth and 9th grade students have to go to their family physician for a health check-up — it is the responsibility of parents to make these appointments and take care of their children's health.

More information and tips regarding monitoring the health of your child can be found at:

Dental Care

Caring for teeth should start at a young age. You should clean your baby's mouth regularly even before the first teeth are cut. The first visit to the dentist could take place when the child cuts their first tooth or when the child is about one year old. You can get the first advice on oral health from a midwife or family nurse in your child's first year of life.

Home hygiene helps to prevent caries. You can start with constant monitoring already when the baby cuts their first teeth. It is recommended to start visiting a dentist regularly when the child is three years old. On the first visits, the parent should stay with the child for support. The most important thing is the positive experience a child gets from the first visits. Children who are already familiar with the dentist and have pleasant experiences will feel comfortable later. When a child is afraid of the dentist, it requires patience from everyone.

Estonian Health Insurance Fund (EHIF) pays for dental care for insured persons under the age of 19. After the child has reached the age of 19, free dental care is provided for one year only if the need for treatment arose during the last visit before the age of 19. A parent has the right to choose a dentist for their child. However, always check that the chosen dentist has a contract with EHIF – contractual partners are listed on website of EHIF. If there is no contract, the parent must pay for the service in full and this money cannot be claimed from EHIF.

EHIF pays only for the services listed in the EHIF list of health care services:

www.tervisekassa.ee/hambaravi-partnerid

In major cities, dentists can generally communicate in Russian or English, but it is always a good idea to check whether the doctor of your choice speaks a language that you can understand. School nurses also work with dentists to refer children for preventive examinations at the age of 7, 9, and 12. If a child needs dental care, it must be provided with the family's knowledge and approval.

Dental care costs for all adults with health insurance can be reimbursed by up to 60 euros per year, but the recipient's own contribution is 50% of the expenditure. Pregnant women and mothers of children under one year of age receive dental benefits of up to 105 euros per year. The patient must pay at least 15% of the bill herself.

Recipients of state issued pension, partially or completely disabled persons, and senior citizens over the age of 63 receive dental benefits of up to 105 euros per year. The patient must pay at least 15% of the bill himself or herself.

People who are unable to take care of their oral hygiene by themselves or with the help of external guidance can get free dental care with the decision of a family doctor or a specialist. These are, for example, profoundly mentally disabled people with intellectual disability, dementia, autism spectrum disorder or other mental abnormalities. Also, those who are paralyzed, without arms, or with diseases that involve movement disorders of the arms (e.g. Parkinson's syndrome, severe chorea). In addition, people with certain oncological and hematological conditions can also use dental treatment at the expense of the health fund.

All adults are entitled to free emergency dental care, regardless of whether they have health insurance or not. Free emergency dental care is provided in the event of dental trauma and in the event that postponing or not providing it may result in the death or permanent health damage of the person in need.

In order to receive urgent dental treatment, you must contact treatment facilities that have signed a contract with the Health Insurance Fund. In case of more serious injuries, you should contact the emergency care department.

Vaccination

Information about vaccination against different diseases in Estonia can be found on the website:

www.vaktsineeri.ee/en/

Science and technology have given us an efficient tool for protecting ourselves from many contagious diseases. Vaccines guarantee people's health both today and in the distant future. By vaccinating, you protect both yourself and everybody else from dangerous contagious diseases.

The vaccines available in Estonia can be divided into two. Some of these are part of the national immunization schedule and are free of charge when administered at the time set out in the schedule. The rest are administered at the recommendation of a doctor or if the person themselves expresses their wish to get vaccinated; a fee is charged for vaccinations like this (e.g. tick-borne encephalitis vaccination).

If a child that arrives in Estonia has documents concerning vaccination in a foreign country, the previous vaccinations of the child are compared to the Estonian vaccination plan and the lacking vaccinations are performed or the vaccination series are completed. In addition to the planned immunization of children and youths, adults need to be vaccinated as well, especially due to epidemiological indications.

Vaccination is voluntary in Estonia and a parent or legal guardian must make the vaccination decision on behalf of the child. The information necessary for making a decision can be obtained from a healthcare professional who provides vaccination services (for example, a family physician or a healthcare provider at school) and from the website www.vaktsineeri.ee/en.

Pregnancy & Childbirth

A pregnant woman living in Estonia and whose pregnancy has been identified by a doctor or a midwife at a public or private health care provider is entitled to national health insurance coverage after providing an application and document issued by a doctor or midwife verifying the pregnancy to EHIF. The national health coverage is valid after EHIF has processed the documents and the insurance cover will terminate three months after the estimated date of delivery as determined by a doctor or midwife. Further information can be found at the website of EHIF or by calling customer service at +372 669 6630 or info@tervisekassa.ee.

Monitoring of pregnancy

The course of the pregnancy is monitored by the midwife, who directs the woman to pregnancy examinations and plans the woman's care pathway. In addition to healthcare professionals, you can also consult a clinical psychologist or social worker if necessary.

In most cases, there are up to ten visits during pregnancy, of which at least two are with a gynecologist. The most important screenings (first trimester ultrasound examination and blood serum test and second trimester ultrasound examination), pregnancy visits and examinations are free of charge for insured women at the contracted partners of the Health Insurance Fund.

Preparation for childbirth and parenthood begins already during pregnancy. Ask your midwife to find the most suitable parental class for you.

Giving birth

There are 12 maternity hospitals in Estonia, in all of them maternity care is covered by EHIF. A midwife will support and help you during childbirth.

If you want a specific midwife for the birth, it is possible to use a paid midwife service in several maternity hospitals. Discuss this with your midwife.

Please note! In Estonia, caesarean section is performed only if it is required for medical purposes.

For a low-risk pregnancy, you can also choose your home as the place of child birth. If you are thinking about a home birth, please consult with your midwife. In Estonia, only midwives with a valid certificate can provide home birth care.

In addition to a midwife, you can use services of a doula, but please note that doulas are not considered healthcare workers in Estonia.

If you have a question or concern about your pregnancy or about your baby's health, you can contact Callmidwife.com helpline 12252. National midwife helpline works around 24/7 (on weekends and public holidays) and provides counseling in Estonian, English and Russian.

Important steps

PS!

Within one month from the day of the child's birth, the birth must be registered at the local government or by submitting an electronic application at rahvastikuregister.ee using an ID-card. You will be entitled to various benefits and allowances once the birth has been registered.

In addition to state benefits, some local governments provide additional benefits to their residents; for more information, please contact the social welfare institution of your local government.

More information about family benefits is available here: www.sotsiaalkindlustusamet.ee/en/family-benefits-and-allowances/family-benefits-overview

All children have health insurance until they reach the age of 19. Newborns, whose principal place of residence is in Estonia, as entered in the population register, are automatically registered to the practice of their mother's family physician (if available).

Mental Health Concerns

Emergency psychiatric care is free of charge.

The World Health Organization describes mental health as a state of well-being in which every individual realizes their own potential, can cope with the normal stresses of life, can work productively and fruitfully, and is able to contribute to their community.

If a person feels that their symptoms related to mental health are starting to interfere with their life, it is wise to seek professional advice. Changes in circadian rhythm, diet, relationships, and coping at work or school may occur over time, but these signs are easier to notice than, for example, decreased happiness.

It is also a good idea to listen to the thoughts and observations of people close to you. For example, if you have one or two symptoms of depression within a few days or weeks, there is no need to worry; however, if the symptoms persist for a month or longer, there is reason to seek help. If you have thoughts or plans of suicide, seek help immediately!

Whom to Contact?

Family physician

A family physician can prescribe medication and perform examinations for possible physical illnesses, which can also cause symptoms similar to a mental health disorder. This is particularly suitable if you have a good relationship with your family physician. A family physician can also refer you to psychotherapy through the Therapy Foundation.

Crisis aid and psychiatrist on duty

First aid within a few hours and quick hospitalization if necessary. Keep in mind that, as a rule, one quick visit is not enough. Emergency psychiatric care is free of charge.

Psychiatrist's appointment at an outpatient clinic – You can make an appointment by simply calling the reception of an outpatient clinic; a referral is not required. A psychiatrist can evaluate the patient's state of health, give appropriate recommendations for treatment, prescribe prescription drugs, and refer patients to a psychotherapy.

Psychiatrist's appointment at an outpatient clinic – You can make an appointment by simply calling the reception of an outpatient clinic; a referral is not required. A psychiatrist can evaluate the patient's state of health, give appropriate recommendations for treatment, prescribe prescription drugs, and refer patients to a psychotherapy. Please keep in mind that there may be long appointment wait times, as all medical specialists have waiting lists. You can call the receptions of different outpatient clinics to get the first available time, but the estimated wait time is about a month or two. A 5-euro visit fee applies to patients over 18 years of age with health insurance.

Clinical psychologist's appointment at an outpatient clinic – A referral from a psychiatrist is required. A clinical psychologist can evaluate the patient's state of health, give recommendations for treatment, refer patients to psychiatrist if necessary, but does not prescribe medication. A 5-euro visit fee applies to patients over 18 years of age with health insurance.

Appointment with a psychiatrist or clinical psychologist at a private clinic – The same treatment options as in outpatient clinics, but appointments are subject to a fee; a referral is not required. Private clinics and medical practitioners also have contracts with the Health Insurance Fund or the local government, which means that only part of the costs have to be paid for. The Unemployment Insurance Fund and Victim Support may also make a referral to a private clinic. Please contact the respective institutions for more information. The waiting lists in private practices are usually shorter than in outpatient clinics.
